WHO WILL BE AUSTRALIA'S BEST BUILDERS?

This year's Master Builders National Excellence in Building and Construction Awards will be held in Adelaide on Saturday November 24. Master Builders director Michael McLean will be attending this prestigious function and reports on WA's nominations in the housing categories for this year's awards.

INNING a Master Builders Housing Excellence Award in WA is an extraordinary achievement.

However, winning a national award for that same home or residential project is an even more exceptional achievement which doesn't come along very often at all.

Each year, the best homes built in each state and territory are nominated for the Master Builders National Excellence in Building and Construction Awards.

Judged solely on the quality of construction excellence, the judging of these awards is taken very seriously and requires a keen eye for detail.

The experienced judging panel, comprised of a combination of active and retired builders from each state and territory, determine who they consider to be award winners in each category.

The quality of each of the entries is incredibly high, and the winner usually ends up being decided by a majority vote.

Western Australia is always proud to participate in the national awards program as WA builders have done extremely well over the years.

Spadaccini Homes from WA was last year's National Residential Master Builder of the Year for a magnificent home built in Watermans Bay.

Once again there are some outstanding homes and unit development projects entered this year, which is a credit to each of the builders involved.

We're proud to introduce to you the residential projects submitted from WA for this year's Master Builders National Excellence in Building and Construction Awards.

Attendance at our national awards is open to anyone in addition to those builders nominated.

We expect a strong contingent of WA's best builders to travel to Adelaide for the Awards in November.

We wish each of our WA representatives the best of luck in these annual awards.
